Start Hearing In Mer Rouge Murder Case

Girl Tells That Masked Men Took Her From Home and Sent Her to Arkansas—Man Tells of Being Held Up

DR. MCKOIN AND OTHERS RECOGNIZED BY WITNESSES

By Associated Press

BASTROP, La., Jan. 10.—Addie Mae Hamilton, 17, declared on the witness stand on investigation into the slaying of Watt Daniel and Thomas Richards that she was forced to leave her home near Mer Rouge and was deported from the state by 'Ku Klux.' She named Dr. B. M. McKoin, former Mer Rouge mayor, and "Punk" Kirkpatrick as two of the party of men who came to her mother's house one night, took her away and put her on a train for Little Rock, the home of her sister. She said McKoin wore a mask but she recognized him She asserted that while the party was taking her from home that members of the party said, "If any body showed their head out of the door they would 'blow 'em off." She added that they told her mother that they were making Addie leave "because Addie had been leading an immoral life.'

W. C. Andrews, who had been flogged by the hooded mob, was the next witness. He said he at one time saw the band dressed in white with a hood reaching to their feet. It was a moonlight night and he recognized Captain Skipworth and Laurie Calhoun and thought he recognized Bod Dade and Dr. McKoin. Skipworth is an official of the Klan. Calhoun recently, as deputy sheriff, brought McKoin back to Louisiana from Baltimore. Dade is mayor of Mer Rouge. On this occasion the witness said nothing happened to him except the hooded band held him up, took his pistol and let him go.

TO DEVELOP ROSE HILL OIL FIELDS

Promoters Here Tell Of Plans For Section—Many Wells To Be Sunk

Efforts to develop the oil fields at Rose Hill will be made early in the spring, according to J.H. Walker who is a partner in a firm that has a lease on 6,000 acres of land there.

F. R. Deppenbaugh and L. C. Madison, experienced oil men from Bowling Green, are in Middlesboro in the interest of futhering the development. They state that prospects for oil in the Rose Hill vicinity are excellent. In several different places traces of oil can be found standing on the streams.

Mr. Walker's firm has a well there 32 feet deep which produces a barrel of oil per day It was dug by hand and an ordinary pump is used to bring the oil to the surface of the ground.

Modern oil machinery will be necessary to dig the wells and it is likely that many will have to be sunk before the possibilities of the section as an oil-producing field are known. Mr. Walker says that local capital will be used to develop the industry there and if oil is found in fair quantities it will mean much for thegrowth of Middlesboro.

No attempts to sell stock in the proposed oil company will be made outside of this section of the country Investors all over the country will be eager to buy shares if the proposition pays as well as is expected, but Mr. Walker says stock will be sold only in this section

'After the fields have been given a fair trial oil refineries will be built if the product is found in sufficient quantities to warrant this. In the first stages of the development it is likely that the crude oil will be piped to a railroad station from whence it will be transported in oil tank cars to the refining places.

"Of course, it is a gamble at the best," said Mr. Walker, "but I believe in giving it a fair trial Citizens may as well invest their money here where they can see how it is used as to invest in some western oil fields that they know nothing of. It will be the biggest thing that has ever struck this section of the country if it proves

NEW SCHOOL HOUSE CAUSES BUILDING BOOM IN NOETOWN

Erection of the new grade building at Noetown has caused a boom in residence building in the neighborhood. J. Matt, Gilson has recently completed a handsome 10-room residence house. Gordon Turner has two modern 5-room bungalows.

Residents of the section say that if the city would open up some of the streets here building activities would greatly increase. Another hindrance to residence building in this part of town is the fact that most of the land is owned by a few individuals who will neither sell nor build on the property.

However, in spite of these handicaps, a larger number of houses are being erected in the West End than in any other section of Middlesboro.

EXPERT MURDERERS DISMEMBER BODIES

Victims Cut Up To Scatter Evidence, Explanation Many Mystery Murders

By Edward Thierry

NEW YORK, Jan 10.—Crime agencies manned by professional criminals are believed to be responsible for several murders where identification of victims still remains a mystery.

'We know there are hired assassins," says Mrs. Mary E. Hamilton, special investigator attached to Police Commissioner Enright's office. "Now comes the question: Are they being aided by experts in destroying evidence?"

Hidden crime of this nature occured in many cities last year, records show.

Two mystery murders in New York recently developed curiously parallel testimony that the bodies of the victims had been dismembered by someone familiar with surgery and anatomy.

Wants Babies Footprinted

"No one is safe where criminology and science join hands,' says Mrs Hamilton, "until identification ceases to be merely a phase of police activity and is made the subject of legislation."

Mrs Hamilton is behind a national campaign to make compulsory the taking of footprints of all babies at birth and the fingerprints of mothers.

"I would also take the fingerprints of all persons who die in hospitals," she said. "Thousands every year are unidentified and are buried in Potters field."

The most recent mystery murder where skilful dismemberment has prevented identification was that of a man of about 30, weighing 125 to 135 pounds, with brown hair and blue gray eyes. The head was found in Bronx Botanical Gardens: five days later the torso was found, and ten days afterwards the left arm and leg were discovered.

A similar case was that of a woman, weighing about 100 pounds with ash-blonde hair and blue-gray eyes Parts of her body were found in Long Island City.

Captain Grant Williams, former head of the missing persons bureau, and now an expert in reconstruction of human skulls and bodies, is aiding in the campaign for better means of identification.

STRIKES INACTIVE CHURCH MEMBERS

Baptist Evangelist Does Not Mince Words to Save Feelings—Many Attend Meeting.

'Enough forces are at work in the church here to sweep the whole world to Christ," declared Dr. Finley F. Gibson at the First Baptist church last night, "but the Baptist people are like gold-fish; they go around and around, always busy but never getting anything done."

A large crowd was present at the service last night, the auditorium being almost filled, Song service which was conducted by Rev. J. Fred Schofield, was a feature of the meeting. The two choirs and the congregation responded well in this service.

With his text as "The Devil Hindering Christs Program for the Church," Dr. Gibson delivered a blow straight from the shoulder at inactive Baptists, those who are ever ready to assist in missionary conferences and other church social activities, but who neglect the real work of the Christian, that of bringing souls to Christ

'Lots of people will walk three miles to hear a famous evangelist preach who will not walk across the street to speak to a lost soul," he declared.

The subject for his sermon for tonight will be: "Christ's Program for the Church Reaching the Lost." Dr. Gibson requests all Sunday school officers and teachers to be present for a few minutes' consultation

KAISER'S FRIEND RUNS TOY SHOP

Scion Of One Of Proudest Prussian Families Has Little Store In Seattle

Seattle, Jan. 10.—Alvo von Alvensleben, scion of one of the proudest families of Prussia, who had millions a few years ago and who was reported to be a personal friend and agent of the Kaiser, today is running a little toy store her.

After remaining in obscurity since his release from Fort Douglas, Utah, where he was interned, Von Alvensleben suddenly made his reappearance in Seattle and, advertised by the newspaper stories about his past is doing a rushing business

Von Alvensleben's career rivals anything in fiction. Born on a family identified with the German nobility since 700, he was brought up with the military caste and was an officer in the German army.

Defies Tradition

He defied tradition, resigned his commission and came to this country in 1904. After working as a common laborer around Vancouver, B. C., two years, he made a "stake" and plunged into land speculations He made millions.

For years he was the social leader of Vancouver He had a mansion that rivaled old world castles. He was attended by hugh retinues of servants. He operated a whole fleet of expensive automobiles. He supported a stable of polo ponies.

Then came the war. Von Alvensleben came to the United States, but ugly rumors followed him and wrecked his business. The story was generally printed that he was slated to be governor-general of Canada—if the kaiser won. And he was certainly intimate with the German embassy.

Interned Three Years

Von Alvensleben was interned and kept in captivity three years. He lost what remained of his fortune—either through confiscation or because of unpaid taxes.

Finally released he had just $51—but he went into business at once as an exporter and importer and was successful in a modest way.

He was still a plunger. He put his entire capital into a cargo of German Christmas goods He would have realized handsomely— if the shipment hadn't been delayed—arriving too late for Christmas.

That resulted in his decision to enter the retail trade—and he's making a success at it. The graces which he once displayed at the German court are now showered upon the humble housewives of seattle—and they like it.

ORGANIZE MEN IN LIFE SAVERS CLUB

Street Car Motormen, Taxi And Truck Drivers To Lessen Traffic Accidents In Louisville

By Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Jan 10.—Enlisting the great legion of men responsible for safe operation of vehicular traffic on the public throughfares—street car motormen and taxicab and commercial truck drivers,—a campaign to cut down the toll of 1922, when forty-six lives were taken in traffic accidents, has been initiated by a Louisville newspaper in conjunction with safety, civic and industrial organizations.

'The Life-Savers Club," composed of men engaged in these occupations and having tangible membership, with worth-while recognition for consistent adherence to the slogan, "Safety First, Last and Always,' has been formed. A band of men with a record of no accidents in the last year is the nucleus of an organization which it is intended to make city-wide, to include al engaged in driving on the public highways.

A parade was held the other day on the down-town streets, in which ninety-two street car motormen rode in taxicabs driven by twenty-four taxi chauffers. Each man in the procession had completed from one to four years of constant service in his particular line without an accident against his record. These were the charter members of the Life Savers' Club.

Response to the call for members and candidates for membership has been instaneous, organizers report. Employers are to be 'honary members" while "active members" are the men who have the actual control of vehicles charged to them, and who are being bought to realize the responsibility they hold.

Employers are pledged to keep accurate records of the work of member employes. The employe too, is given incentive to keep a clean slate, for if he changes his job, it is pointed out, a clear sheet makes a very acceptable reference.

Placards will mark cars and firms enlisted in he movement to make traffic operation safe. Bronze buttons will ornament the lapels of men who have clean recods extnding over one year, while hose with a five year record will be rewarded in a manner to be determined later, according to the committee in charge.

A THOUGHT

Perfect love casteth out fear.—1 John 4:18.

The first duty of every man in the world is that of subduing fear; he must get rid of fear; until then his acts are slavish not true.—Thomas Carlyle.

AMERICA'S BESETTING SIN

America's besetting sin is contempt for law. It is strange for in this country contempt for law is self-contempt, for the people make the laws. But after making them they leave it to selected agents to enforce them and are as often as not in sympathy with the law breakers which their own agents are trying to suppress.

It is easy to understand how a resident of a country that is controlled by a ruler or a ruling class might feel that the laws he is called on to obey are tyrannical. In this country if the laws are tyrannical the people are the tyrants. Isn't it strange that in foreign countries people are much more obedient to laws that are forced on them than our own people are to the laws they have selected for their own guidance?

We need not go out of the South for the most striking displays of this spirit of lawlessness. Possibly Florida will furnish a striking picture before the conclusion of the year. But look at Columbus where the homes of the officials and private citizens are being guarded against dynamiters. Go a little further west and see the picture of Louisiana.—Florida Times Union.

BOSTON AND POE

A slight to the memory of Edgar Allen Poe, which has long rankled in the hearts of certain Bostonians, has been corrected. Poe's name has been restored to the square at Broadway and Carver streets, and the name of Matthew Ryan, a soldier of the World War which had supplanted it, has been bestowed upon a square in another part of the city. This was accomplished by the Author's Club of Boston, backed by several prominent newspapers, and now everything is serene in the Hub City so far as honoring Poe is concerned.

There was probably no malice back of the removal of Poe's name from the square, but it was not in good taste. Paying tribute to a war hero is all well and good, but landmarks need not be sacrificed in order to make the act possible. Poe was born in Boston, and while he was harshly criticised by some prominent literati of the Hub City and made some galling comments in return, he is now claimed with all the fervor which once was displayed by the seven cities which contended for the honor of giving birth to Homer.

Poe has never received the full meed of honor which is due him from his native land. He was applauded in Germany, France and England before he was taken seriously by the critics of this country. His tales were recognized as masterpieces abroad, before they became, in a measure, the inspiration of Brete Harte, who in turn, fired the imagination of the late O. Henry. Poe's contributions to American literature are imperishable. It is fitting that the Author's Club of Boston took up the cudgel against the obliteration of his name from one of the city's squares. Not Boston, but the Nation as well, applauds the triumph.—Louisville Times.

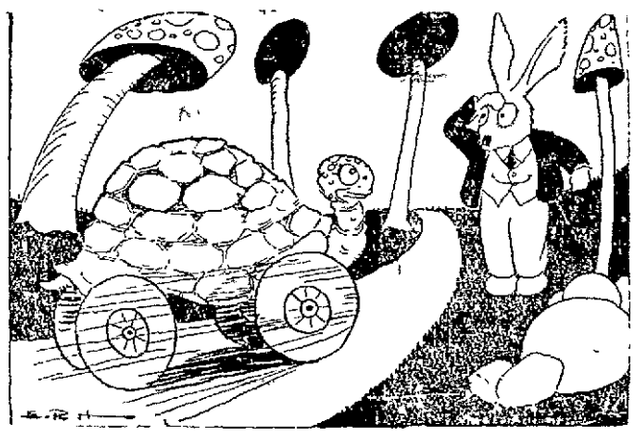
Adventures of The Twins

By Olive Roberts Barton



This is what Torty Turtle did in Dreamland!

What's that' my dears? You are asking how Torty got there when he's so very slow!

Simple as A. B. C, or rather as X. Y. Z When he was snoring away through his gollparrot beak down under the mud in the bottom of Ripple Creek, not far from the place Phil Frog had been snoozing before he went to Dreamland—well, when Torty was snoring away, Nancy and Nick in their Green Shoes, and DuskyCoat the Fairy sandman, with his bag came along and found him and sprinkled him with magic dust. Then, ker-flip, ker-flop, ker-flump!

A little flip-flop opened right under Torty and after about fifty somersaults he landed right in the middle of Dreamland.

While he was blinking his eyes like chewing gum signs (you know the kind that shine at night and keep going off and on) a fairy approached him.

'Welcome to Dreamland!" said she smiling graciously

'Thank you Ma'am,' answered astonished Torty. So that's why this place is, is it? Well, I shouldn't have thought so for there's my rival Ben Bunny over there who beats me in all the races I'd like to get away from him for a little while"

"Is that what you desire most?" asked the fairy 'More than anything else in the world!"

"Nope," answere Torty quickly. "There's just one thing I wish for more and that's to beat Ben Bunny in a race"

'Well then,' smiled the fairy. "Your wish will be granted Bye brought you an electric motor and four nice wheels. We are going to make you into a turtomobile."

"For goodness sake!" declared Torty with a delighted grin 'That will be fine! Put 'em on now, will you?"

And the fairy did so.

In five minutes Torty Turtomobile whizzed under Ben Bunny astonished nose and back again.

'Bet I can beat you in a race now, Ben," he cried saucily.

Warm Clothing and Heat in Homes Seems Like Impossible Dream of Luxury to Russian Children

NEW YEAR'S DAWN BRINGS A GLOOMY OUTLOOK FOR THESE RUSSIAN CHILDREN, WHO ARE WEARING TATTERS THAT WERE GARMENTS EIGHT YEARS AGO

Any little tyke out of at least one million Russian children, if given exactly his choice of a Christmas present this year, would have chosen something—anything, no matter what—to keep him warm. If some good fairy should endow him not only with the right to make any good resolution he liked, but with the power to keep it, he would undoubtedly write down, 'Resolved: That I will not freeze." During the present extreme clothing shortage in the bitter winter weather of Russia children and adults alike regard warmth, even enough of it to keep them alive, as the supreme boon.

The coming of the New Year in cold Russia finds at least a million children and adults dressed in rags or in single garments of thin flour sacking, their bare skin showing through, or even in newspapers stitched together in the shape of clothes. American Relief Administration workers in Russia have reported to Herbert Hoover. The intense cold, even in the earlier part of the winter, has prevented hundreds of thousands of children, dressed in tatters, from going to the A. R. A. kitchens where they get their one meal a day. Adults in a plight fully as desperate as that of the youngsters, huddle with them in their unheated homes. The price of fuel, like the price of clothing, is prohibitive. A shoestring in Russia costs the equivalent of two days' pay, and the price of every article of clothing is correspondingly high.

American Relief Administration workers estimate that at least a million children and adults will be facing death during the worst weather of the New Year unless clothing is sent to them. To prevent this terrible calamity, the American Relief Administration has evolved a new clothing remittance plan from the famous Hoover food remittance system that successfully saved hundreds of thousands of lives last year. Twenty dollars, sent to the New York headquarters of the A. R. A, 42 Broadway, will purchase one of these packages, and secure its delivery to any designated individual in Russia. The donor will receive a direct receipt from the Russian who gets the clothing, thus enabling him definitely to trace his gift. If the giver prefers, he may mark his package "General relief," in which case it will be distributed to some one of the many cases of terrible need.

Each package contains the following: 4½ yards of warm, dark wool cloth, enough to make outer garments for two children, or a suit for either a man or a woman; 4 yards of cotton lining; 16 yards of muslin, for four suits of underwear; 8 yards of flannelette, for two men's shirts, or two women's shirtwaists; buttons and thread to make up this material.

Berton Braley's Daily Poem

ADVENTURERS

By Berton Braley

Daily they go forth to their work.
Unheralded, unlaureled and unsung;
They penetrate the coal mine's dusty murk,
They climb the gaunt steel girders they have flung
Against the sky, beneath the river mud
They drill the tunnels where the trains shall run,
They cut down mountains and they dam the flood.
Doing the job that must be bravely done

The hot blast furnace, belching gas and flame,
Is theirs to feed, they forge the glowing steel.
They wield the the locomotive's massive frame.
Their hammers beat upon the vessels keel.
They string the wires that bring the city light,
Down to the sea in ships they take their way.
Steady and calm by day and through the night
They do their work and earn their meed of pay

Death lurks beside them, but they do their job,
Forever daring, ever unafraid,
Keeping the world's machinery athrob.
Plain humdrum men of every craft and trade;
No pioneer, no soldier of romance
Has greater need of courage or of nerve
Than these who ever battle circumstance—
Adventurers who labor and who serve!

THE ONE-MAN WOMAN

By Ruth Agnes Abeling.

KATE WARD, living with her widower father,
JUSTIN PARSONS, has a visitor,
CHINATOWN ALICE, who says Kate's dead husband,
DAN WARD, was father of Alice's child,
DOROTHY. The latter falls ill and Kate offers aid, but after a strange unsatisfactory interview with Alice, is discussing the case with her father, when their dog,
MONK, leads them, in the late evening, to the body of an unconscious man Carrying him to their home, Kate has just found in his pocket an envelope bearing the name,
JAMES LATHAM, when her father arrives with a doctor.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

The doctor examined the man, found he was stunned but not seriously injured, and then suggested that Justin and he get him to bed, if he could be kept there for the night

"Hotel's quite a piece from here—less traveling he does for a few days better off he'll be." The physician was a man of few words.

'Wonder how it happened, anyhow—suppose somebody's, wondering where he is right this minute. Find anything to tell you who he is?" he asked.

Justin mentioned the envelope and explained, too, that he had stopped on his way for the doctor to send a telegram to Mrs James Latham" at Sullivan.

"I thought that he might be married and a message would reach his wife or mother or whoever he has there," he added

'Good!" said the physisian.

The two men set about making James Latham—if that was his name—comfortable. They took him to the one room upstairs—Kate's room.

During the process of getting him to bed he regained consciousness, opened his eyes, looked at the two men near him and then closed them again in natural sleep.

The door at the head of the stairs was left open, and Kate resting on a couch in near the foot of the stairs in the sitting room, knew that the guest under their roof must be sleeping well for she heard no sound save his regular breathing. She slept little. Her brain was busy with the events of the past few days So much had happened and so little of its meaning was clear. Yet, strangely, she had a sense of peace about the whole thing.

When she tried to reason, her brain told her that something was wrong—that there was a reason for anxiety. When she let go, became instately feminine and let her intution have precedence, she felt at peace.

She smiled a little as she rose next morning and talked half aloud.

'" Dan always used to say I had an uncanny gift for reading people and circumstances—perhaps he knew—perhaps," sh esaid.

Dressing hurridly, she went upstairs.

Her patient she found sitting up in bed.

Even unshaven and with a bandaged head, there was about him an unmistakeable sense of breeding, culture and a certain worldliness which was not altogether unpleasant in its effect

He smiled as Kate entered the room it was a charming smile and Kate wondered as she watched the play of it what the voice which accompanied it would be like.

She pulled up the curtains as she said 'Good morning"

She was eager, yet half feared to hear his reply

What if his voice should be the voice she heard with Alice the other evening.

Kate saw the smile return to the face of the injured man and then watched his lips open to speak.

Tell Me Again

Tell me again the story
That you told when we both were young!
You were my prince in glory,
A prince with a golden tongue,
And the touch of your hand was thrilling.
The fact that you lived was joy—
But I was only a girl then dear.
And you were only a boy.

Tell me, the way you told me
When our love was the song of spring!
Hold me as you would hold me
When our love was a sacred thing!
Let the silver that's in your hair, love,
Be jet as as it used to be
When I was so new to caresses
And you were so great to me!

Here by the fireside sitting,
As the pictres in flames run by,
Sweet be the moments flitting,
And children just you and I!
For the love of our age is richer,
And yet—I would feel the joy
Of the love that was only a girl's dear,
For her prince was only a boy.
Of the love who was only a girl's,

DUMPLINGS LIKE MOTHER'S

By Bertha E. Sharpleigh, of Columbia University

The apples should be pared, cored and dipped in melted butter. Fill each cavity left by the cores removal with one tablespoonful of sugar, mixed with a quarter of a teaspoon of cinnamon.

Place an apple on a square of paste adn bring the four corners up to meet at the top. Pinch the sides firmly together.

Put the apples, thus covered, on a pan and bake 30 to 40 minutes in a hot oven.

Serve with cream, or hard sauce made by creaming together one-half cupful of butter and one cupful of powdered sugar. Add one-fourth teaspoonful of lemon and a few drops of vanilla extract.

COUE MAKES HIS PATIENTS FORGET THEIR TROUBLE

"Ca Passe, Ca Passe," He asks To Be Repeated Over and Over— Effect On Suffering Is Remarkable

WHOLE PROCESS IS PURELY ONE OF AUTOSUGGESTION

By Milton Bronner

NANOY, France, Jan. 10.—The thing that differentiates the auto-suggestion clinics held by Monsieur Emile Coue from any clinics in the world to which suffering people go is this: we laugh with Coue and at ourselves

He can reprove when reproof is necessary, but he prefers to joke with us and to make us joke, too.

One day when I was there an intellectual woman, after hearing him explain how ancient a thing autosuggestion is, said rather cattily.

'In other words you have discovered the moon."

"No, madame," he replied, with fine dignity, "but I have learned to teach you how to work by its light in your darkness."

Treating Rheumatism

Over in the corner sits a husky looking peasant woman in black. Her toil-worn hands show how she has labored beside her husband on their farm. She has trouble using her right arm; thinks she has "rheumatics."

Coue rapidly strokes the sleeve of her blouse, bidding her say after him —"Ca passe, ca passe, ca passe."

"It is going away, it is going away, it is going away." Only he wants her to say it so rapidly that it sounds like a bee buzzing endlessly. Then Coue straightens himself.

"How does the arm feel now?"

"Much better."

"Hit me with your right fist."

She strikes him in the chest.

"Hit harder."

She almost knocks him down

Coue smilingly suggests that she go home and hit her husband that way.

"Oh, no, monsieur. He would hit back!"

Playing Game Of Tag

Enter another type. She is French bourgeois, perhaps 65, in black, with her old-fashioned gold chain and locket around her throat.

She has come in walking painfully, slowly by the aid of a cane. Monsieur Coue "ca-passes" her. Then he suggests that she get up and try to walk.

She looks for her cane, but Coue gives her his hand like an ancient gallant in the time of King Louis, leads her across the room.

"It's like a minuet," he says gaily. "Now again madame"

He gently drops her hand.

"Now walk by yourself."

She does so.

"Oh, but faster."

She increases her speed.

"Now walk after me and catch me."

Coue walks around a table, the old lady fast after him. Then she goes back to her chair, seemingly none the worse for this to her unheard of exertion.

"Oh, one more exercise," says Coue.

He gives her the cane and tells her to walk and to carry it on her shoulder like a French soldier on the march She does so. And there are women in the crowd who smile through tears at what seems a veritable miracle to them

Exception Proves Rule

All except one old woman, whose cheeks are fever-red with excitement and pain. She starts to give Coue a catalogue of her numerous aches Coue says something. The old lady catches only the word "mind" she snaps, 'I am sick in my body."

"Ah, but you are sick in the mind."

"You can't fool me,' she says determinedly.

'Dear lady I am not trying to fool you. We are going to help your body through your mind."

He "ca-passes" her and she is sure he hasn't helped her much But the next day she is back again. And she smiles at Coue.

TOMORROW—Bronner describes "cures" of fellow patients.

A THOUGHT

Perfect love casteth out fear.—1 John 4:18.

The first duty of every man in the world is that of subduing fear; he must get rid of fear; until then his acts are slavish not true.—Thomas Carlyle.

AMERICA'S BESETTING SIN

America's besetting sin is contempt for law. It is strange for us in this country contempt for law is self-contempt, for the people make the laws. But after making them they leave it to selected agents to enforce them and are as often as not in sympathy with the law breakers which their own agents are trying to suppress

It is easy to understand how a resident of a country that is controlled by a ruler or a ruling class might feel that the laws he is called on to obey are tyrannical. In this country if the laws are tyrannical the people are the tyrants. Isn't it strange that in foreign countries people are much more obedient to laws that are forced on them than our own people are to the laws they have selected for their own guidance?

We need not go out of the South for the most striking displays of this spirit of lawlessness. Possibly Florida will furnish a striking picture before the conclusion of the year. But look at Columbus where the homes of the officials and private citizens are being guarded against dynamiters. Go a little further west and see the picture of Louisiana.—Florida Times Union.

BOSTON AND POE

A slight to the memory of Edgar Allen Poe, which has long rankled in the hearts of certain Bostonians, has been corrected. Poe's name has been restored to the square at Broadway and Carver streets, and the name of Matthew Ryan, a soldier of the World War, which had supplanted it, has been bestowed upon a square in another part of the city. This was accomplished by the Author's Club of Boston, backed by several prominent newspapers, and now everything is serene in the Hub City so far as honoring Poe is concerned.

There was probably no malice back of the removal of Poe's name from the square, but it was not in good taste Paying tribute to a war hero is all well and good, but landmarks need not be sacrificed in order to make the act possible Poe was born in Boston, and while he was harshly criticised by some prominent literati of the Hub City and made some galling comments in return, he is now claimed with all the fervor which once was displayed by the seven cities which contended for the honor of giving birth to Homer.

Poe has never received the full meed of honor which is due him from his native land. He was applauded in Germany, France and England before he was taken seriously by the critics of this country. His tales were recognized as masterpieces abroad, before they became, in a measure, the inspiration of Brete Harte, who in turn, fired the imagination of the late O. Henry. Poe's contributions to American literature are imperishable. It is fitting that the Author's Club of Boston took up the cudgel against the obliteration of his name from one of the city's squares. Not Boston, but the Nation as well, applauds the triumph.—Louisville Times

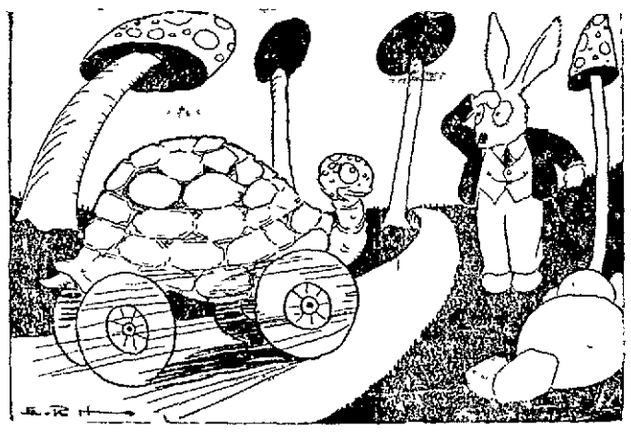
By Olive Roberts Barton



This is what Torty Turtle did in dreamland!

What's that' my dears? You are asking how Torty got there when he's so very slow!

Simple as A, B, C, or rather as X, Y, Z. When he was snoring away through his pollparrot beak down under the mud in the bottom of Ripple Creek, not far from the place Phil Frog had been snoozing before he went to Dreamland—well, when Torty was snoring away, Nancy and Nick in their Green Shoes, and DustyCoat the fairy sandman, with his bag came along and found him and sprinkled him with magic dust. Then, ker-flip, ker-flop, ker-flump!

A little trap-door opened right under Torty and after about fifty somersaults he landed right in the middle of Dreamland

While he was blinking his eyes like chewing gum signs (you knew the kind that shine at night and keep going off and on) a fairy approached him.

Welcome to Dreamland" said she smiling graciously

'Thank you Ma'am," answered astonished Torty So that's what this place is, is it? Well, I shouldn't have thought so for there's my rival Ben Bunny over there who beats me in all the races. I'd like to get away from him for a little while"

"Is that what you desire most?" asked the fairy 'More than anything else in the world?"

"Nope" answere Torty quickly. "There's just one thing I wish for more and that's to beat Ben Bunny in a race"

'Well then,' smiled the fairy. "Your wish will be granted I've brought you an electric motor and four nice wheels We are going to make you into a turtomobile"

"For goodness sake!" declared Torty with a delighted grin 'That will be fine! Put 'em on now, will you?"

And the fairy did so.

In five minutes Torty Turtomobile whizzed under Ben Bunny astonished nose and back again.

"Bet I can beat you in a race now, Ben," he cried saucily.

Warm Clothing and Heat in Homes Seems Like Impossible Dream of Luxury to Russian Children

NEW YEAR'S DAWN BRINGS A GLOOMY OUTLOOK FOR THESE RUSSIAN CHILDREN, WHO ARE WEARING TATTERS THAT WERE GARMENTS EIGHT YEARS AGO

Any little tyke out of at least one million Russian children, if given exactly his choice of a Christmas present this year, would have chosen something—anything, no matter what—to keep him warm. If some good fairy should endow him not only with the right to make any good resolution he liked, but with the power to keep it, he would undoubtedly write down, "Resolved: That I will not freeze." During the present extreme clothing shortage in the bitter winter weather of Russia children and adults alike regard warmth, even enough of it to keep them alive, as the supreme boon.

The coming of the New Year in cold Russia finds at least a million children and adults dressed in rags or in single garments of thin flour sacking, their bare skin showing through, or even in newspapers stitched together in the shape of clothes, American Relief Administration workers in Russia have reported to Herbert Hoover. The intense cold, even in the earlier part of the winter, has prevented hundreds of thousands of children, dressed in tatters, from going to the A. R. A. kitchens where they get their one meal a day. Adults in a plight fully as desperate as that of the youngsters, huddle with them in their unheated homes. The price of fuel, like the price of clothing, is prohibitive. A shoestring in Russia costs the equivalent of two days' pay, and the price of every article of clothing is correspondingly high.

American Relief Administration workers estimate that at least a million children and adults will be facing death during the worst weather of the New Year unless clothing is sent to them. To prevent this terrible calamity, the American Relief Administration has evolved a new clothing remittance plan from the famous Hoover food remittance system that successfully saved hundreds of thousands of lives last year. Twenty dollars, sent to the New York headquarters of the A. R. A., 42 Broadway, will purchase one of these packages, and secure its delivery to any designated individual in Russia. The donor will receive a direct receipt from the Russian who gets the clothing, thus enabling him definitely to trace his gift If the giver prefers, he may mark his package "General relief," in which case it will be distributed to some one of the many cases of terrible need.

Each package contains the following: 4⅓ yards of warm, dark wool cloth, enough to make outer garments for two children, or a suit for either a man or a woman; 4 yards of cotton lining; 16 yards of muslin, for four suits of underwear; 8 yards of flannelette, for two men's shirts, or two women's shirtwaists; buttons and thread to make up this material.

THE ONE-MAN WOMAN

By Ruth Agnes Abeling.

KATE WARD, living with her widower father,
JUSTIN PARSONS, has a visitor,
CHINATOWN ALICE, who slays Kate's dead husband,
DAN WARD, was father of Alice's child,
DOROTHY. The latter falls ill and Kate offers aid, but after a strange unsatisfactory interview with Alice, is discussing the case with her father, when their dog,
MONK leads them, in the late evening, to the body of an unconscious man Carrying him to their home, Kate has just found in his pocket an envelope bearing the name,
JAMES LATHAM, when her father arrives with a doctor.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

The doctor examined the man, found he was stunned but not seriously injured, and then suggested that Justin and he get him to bed, if he could be kept there for the night.

"Hotel's quite a piece from here—less traveling he does for a few days better off he'll be." The physician was a man of few words.

'Wonder how it happened, anyhow—suppose somebody's wondering where he is right this minute. Find anything to tell you who he is?" he asked.

Justin mentioned the envelope and explained, too, that he had stopped on his way for the doctor to send a telegram to Mrs James Latham" at Sullivan.

"I thought that he might be married and a message would reach his wife or mother or whoever he has there," he added

'Good!" said the physician.

The two men set about making James Latham—if that was his name—comfortable. They took him to the one room upstairs—Kate's room

During the process of getting him to bed he regained consciousness, opened his eyes, looked at the two men near him and then closed them again in natural sleep.

The door at the head of the stairs was left open, and Kate resting on a couch in near the foot of the stairs in the sitting room, knew that the guest under their roof must be sleeping well for she heard no sound save his regular breathing. She slept little. Her brain was busy with the events of the past few days. So much had happened and so little of its meaning was clear. Yet, strangely, she had a sense of peace about the whole thing.

When she tried to reason, her brain told her that something was wrong—that there was a reason for anxiety. When she let go, became inately feminine and let her intuition have precedence, she felt at peace.

She smiled a little as she rose next morning and talked half aloud.

"'Dan always used to say I had an uncanny gift for reading people and circumstances—perhaps he knew—perhaps," sh esaid.

Dressing hurridly, she went upstairs.

Her patient she found sitting up in bed.

Even unshaven and with a bandaged head, there was about him an unmistakeable sense of breeding, culture and a certain worldliness which was not altogether unpleasant in its effect

He smiled as Kate entered the room, if was a charming smile and Kate wondered as she watched the play of it what the voice which accompanied it would be like.

She pulled up the curtains as she said "Good morning"

She was eager, yet half feared to hear his reply

What if his voice should be the voice she heard with Alice the other evening

Kate saw the smile return to the face of the injured man and then watched his lips open to speak.

ADVENTURERS

By Berton Braley

Daily they go forth to their work.
Unheralded, unlaureled and unsung;
They penetrate the coal mine's dusty murk,
They climb the gaunt steel girders they have flung
Against the sky; beneath the river mud
They drill the tunnels where the trains shall run,
They cut down mountains and they dam the flood,
Doing the job that must be bravely done

The hot blast furnace, belching gas and flame,
Is theirs to feed, they forge the glowing steel,
They wield the the locomotive's massive frame.
Their hammers beat upon the vessels keel,
They string the wires that bring the city light,
Down to the sea in ships they take their way,
Steady and calm by day and through the night
They do their work and earn their meed of pay.

Death lurks beside them, but they do their job,
Forever daring, ever unafraid,
Keeping the world's machinery athrob.
Plain humdrum men of every craft and trade;
No pioneer, no soldier of romance
Has greater need of courage or of nerve
Than these who ever battle circumstance—
Adventurers who labor and who serve!

Know thyself—but don't tell everybody about it.

He who hesitates is old fashioned.

DO YOU WONDER?

Asks This Lady, "That I'm a Believer in Cardui?"—Had Been So Weak She Had to Go to Bed.

Osawatomie, Kans.—Mrs. E. E. Keast, formerly of Illinois, residing here, says: "We moved to this state eleven years ago, and I had good health for a long while; and then some year or so ago I had a bad sick spell. . . .

"I got so weak I couldn't go. I couldn't stand on my feet at all. I had to go to bed. I suffered a great deal. I was so nervous I felt I couldn't live. I tried medicines, and everything; had the best of attention, yet I wasn't able to get up. I lay for three months, not able to do anything.

"My husband is a bill poster and has circulars distributed. One day there chanced to be a Ladies Birthday Almanac among his circulars. I read it, and told some of the family to get me a bottle of Cardui. . . .

"I quit all other medicines and took it (Cardui) faithfully, and two weeks from the time I began to take Cardui I was out of bed—better than for months.

"I kept it up and continued to improve until I was a well woman.

"Do you wonder that I am a believer in Cardui? I certainly am. And I am sure there is no better tonic made for women than Cardui." NC-151

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

You Can Bring Back Color and Lustre With Sage Tea and Sulphur

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly Preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. At little cost you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound and look years younger.

RED PEPPER HEAT STOPS BACKACHE

The heat of red peppers takes the "ouch" from a sore, lame back. It can not hurt you, and it certainly ends the torture at once.

When you are suffering so you can hardly get around, just try Red Pepper Rub, and you will have the quickest relief known. Nothing has such concentrated, penetrating heat as red peppers.

Just as soon as you apply Red Pepper Rub you will feel the tingling heat. In three minutes it warms the sore spot through and through. Pain and soreness are gone.

Ask any druggist for a jar of Rowles Red Pepper Rub. Be sure to get the genuine, with the name Rowles on each package.

Rub Rheumatic Pain From Aching Joints

Rub Pain right out with small trial bottle of old "St. Jacobs Oil."

Stop "dosing" Rheumatism.

It's pain only; not one case in fifty requires internal treatment. Rub soothing, penetrating "St. Jacobs Oil" right on the "tender spot," and by the time you say Jack Robinson—out comes the rheumatic pain and distress. "St. Jacobs Oil" is a harmless rheumatism liniment which never disappoints and doesn't burn the skin. It takes pain, soreness and stiffness from aching joints, muscles and bones; stops sciatica, lumbago, backache and neuralgia.

Limber up! Get a small trial bottle of old-time, honest "St. Jacobs Oil" from any drug store, and in a moment, you'll be free from pains, aches and stiffness. Don't suffer! Rub rheumatism away.

5,285 INSPECTIONS PER CAR

The faithfulness of performance so universally remarked in Dodge Brothers Motor Cars, is due, in no small part, to the thoroughness with which each unit is inspected during the process of manufacture and assembly.

A trained staff of 1100 experts is employed in this work alone, and approximately 5,285 inspections are made on each car.

So exacting and rigid are the standards applied to these inspections that the slightest variation, either in workmanship or material, is sufficient cause for immediate rejection.

Dodge Brothers are almost over-scrupulous in their constant aim to make each car as sound and perfect as is humanly possible.

Tell Me Again

Tell me again the story
That you told when we both were young!
You were my prince in glory,
A prince with a golden tongue,
And the touch of your hand was thrilling.
The fact that you lived was joy—
But I was only a girl then dear,
And you were only a boy.

Tell me, the way you told me
When our love was the song of spring!
Hold me as you would hold me
When our love was a sacred thing!
Let the silver that's in your hair, love,
Be jet, as it used to be
When I was so new to caresses
And you were so great to me!

Here by the fireside sitting,
As the pictres in flames run by,
Sweet be the moments flitting,
And children just you and I!
For the love of our age is richer,
And yet—I would feel the joy
Of the love that was only a girl's dear,
For her prince was only a boy.
Or the love who was only a girl's.
—Henry Edward Warner in the Richmond Times-Dispatch.

TODAY'S RECIPES

DUMPLINGS LIKE MOTHER'S

By Bertha E. Sharpleigh, of Columbia University

Make a good plain paste, roll to one-fourth an inch thick and cut into squares, each large enough to cover an apple completely.

The apples should be pared, cored and dipped in melted butter. Fill each cavity left by the cores removal with one tablespoonful of sugar, mixed with a quarter of a teaspoon of cinnamon.

Place an apple on a square of paste and bring the four corners up to meet at the top. Pinch the sides firmly together.

Put the apples, thus covered, on a pan and bake 30 to 40 minutes in a hot oven.

Serve with cream, or hard sauce made by creaming together one-half cupful of butter and one cupful of powdered sugar. Add one-fourth teaspoonful of lemon and a few drops of vanilla extract.

COUE MAKES HIS PATIENTS FORGET THEIR TROUBLE

"Ca Passe, Ca Passe," He asks To Be Repeated Over and Over— Effect On Suffering Is Remarkable

WHOLE PROCESS IS PURELY ONE OF AUTOSUGGESTION

By Milton Bronner

NANCY, France, Jan 10.—The thing that differentiates the auto suggestion clinics held by Monsieur Emile Coue from any clinics in the world to which suffering people go is this, we laugh with Coue and at ourselves

He can reprove when reproof is necessary, but he prefers to joke with us and to make us joke, too.

One day when I was there an intellectual woman, after hearing him explain how ancient a thing autosuggestion is, said rather cattily:

'In other words you have discovered the moon"

'No, madame," he replied, with fine dignity, "but I have learned to teach you how to work by its light in your darkness."

Treating Rheumatism

Over in the corner sits a husky looking peasant woman in black. Her toil-worn hands show how she has labored beside her husband on their farm. She has trouble using her right arm; thinks she has "rheumatics."

Coue rapidly strokes the sleeve of her blouse, bidding her say after him —"Ca passe, ca passe, ca passe."

"It is going away, it is going away, it is going away." Only he wants her to say it so rapidly that it sounds like a bee buzzing endlessly. Then Coue straightens himself.

"How does the arm feel now?"

"Much better."

"Hit me with your right fist."

She strikes him in the chest.

'Hit harder."

She almost knocks him down

Coue smilingly suggests that she go home and hit her husband that way.

"Oh, no, monsieur. He would hit back!"

Playing Game Of Tag

Enter another type. She is French bourgeois, perhaps 65, in black, with her old-fashioned gold chain and locket around her throat.

She has come in walking painfully, slowly by the aid of a cane. Monsieur Coue 'ca-passes' her. Then he suggests that she get up and try to walk.

She looks for her cane, but Coue gives her his hand like an ancient gallant in the time of King Louis, leads her across the room.

"It's like a minuet," he says gaily. "Now again madame"

He gently drops her hand.

"Now walk by yourself."

She does so.

"Oh, but faster."

She increases her speed.

'Now walk after me and catch me."

Coue walks around a table, the old lady fast after him Then she goes back to her chair, seemingly none the worse for this to her unheard of exertion.

"Oh, one more exercise," says Coue

He gives her the cane and tells her to walk and to carry it on her shoulder like a French soldier on the march She does so And there are women in the crowd who smile through tears at what seems a veritable miracle to them

Exception Proves Rule

All except one old woman, whose cheeks are covered with excitement and pain She starts to give Coue a catalogue of her numerous aches Coue says something. The old lady catches only the word 'mind' she snaps, 'I am sick in my body

"Ah, but you are sick in the mind."

"You can't fool me' she says determinedly

'Dear lady I am not trying to fool you. We are going to help your body through your mind"

He "ca-passes' her and she is sure he hasn't helped her much But the next day she is back again. And she smiles at Coue

TOMORROW—Bronner describes "cures" of fellow patients.

Why L&N Employees are Worth-while Citizens

A man is judged by the company he keeps, and a community progresses in direct proportion to the prosperity of its family heads and wage earners. The steadily employed, well paid, bread-winner is the good citizen who takes a part in building his city or town by spending with its trades people and professional men, a portion of his income.

Of the great army of L. & N. employees, nearly 50,000 in number; from St. Louis, Missouri, to River Junction, Florida; from Cincinnati, Ohio, to Atlanta, Georgia; from Bowling Green, Kentucky, to Memphis, Tennessee and from Louisville, Kentucky, to New Orleans, Louisiana; the average yearly income of these L. & N. employed, good citizens is nearly $1,600.00 while the national average wage of family heads is but $933.00, and statistics show that 72% of all the people in America earn less than $1,500.00 a year.

L. & N. employees are worth-while citizens of every community, taking a worth-while part not only in serving that community with unexcelled freight and passenger service, but by adding substantially to the economic prosperity of their neighborhood.
